

American College of Veterinary Radiology

Examination Honor Code

The contents of the ACVR Preliminary and Certification examinations are confidential. You are prohibited from divulging any information about the questions, images, or case material included in the ACVR Preliminary or Certifying Examination to anyone during or after the examination.

For the Certification examination this includes discussion of format of cases, such as number of images, types of images, “hidden” views or supplemental studies presented to you. Your description of the case, medical management, or final diagnosis may not be discussed with anyone.

For the Preliminary examination, use of any electronic devices during the examination other than those provided to you by ACVR is strictly prohibited and will be considered a violation of the honor code.

Your confidentiality is required in order to ensure each candidate an equal opportunity to pass the examination. If any candidate is thought to be in violation of the Honor Code, a detailed report with charges of the violation will be sent to the ACVR Executive Council for action. A candidate found to be in violation of the Honor Code by Executive Council will have their examination results nullified.

All candidates must read and sign the following statement prior to participating in the examination:

I have read and understand the ACVR Honor Code. I agree to keep the contents of the ACVR Examination confidential. I agree to report any inappropriate discussions or actions I observe to the Examination Committee. I will not provide assistance to, nor accept assistance from anyone during the examination.

Name: _____

Signature: _____

Date: _____